

Sergei Alpatov is Associate Professor in Russian Folklore at the Lomonosov Moscow State University. He has published articles on Old Russian literature and folklore from the twelfth to the seventeenth centuries. His research interests also include mythopoetics and cultural interactions in literature and folklore in early modern Europe.

Marina Balina is Isaac Funk Professor Emerita at Illinois Wesleyan University, USA. She is the author, editor and co-editor of 11 collective monographs. Her main area of investigation is childhood and children's literature in Soviet Russia, its historical development, and its theoretical originality. Her scholarly interests include the hybrid nature of life-writing in Soviet and post-Soviet Russia (autobiography, memoir, diary, and travelogue).

Nikolai A. Bogomolov is a professor in the faculty of journalism at Lomonosov Moscow State University. His main fields of interest are the history of Russian literature in the twentieth century, versification theory, and textual criticism.

Claudia Criveller is Associate Professor in Russian Literature and Language at the University of Padua. Her main research areas are Russian Modernism and early twentieth-century Russian literature, with a particular focus on Andrei Bely's works. She has also worked on intersemiotic translation, working on Dostoevsky's as well as Bely's works. She has authored theoretical works on Russian autobiographical fiction with a focus on Nabokov, Venedikt Erofeev, Siniavskii and Kharitonov.

Marlow Davis is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures at Columbia University in the City of New York. He is an archivist, graphic artist and translator.

Patrizia Deotto is Associate Professor of Russian Language and Literature at the University of Trieste. Her research activity has been mainly aimed at investigating twentieth-century Russian literature, with a particular focus on Russian emigration and the cultural ties between Italy and Russia. She has been editor of the section Performance – in particular the subsections Opera and Artists – of the website Arte e cultura russa a Milano e Lombardia [Art and Russian Culture in Milan and Lombardia]. Over the last few years she has focussed her attention on biography and autobiography, paying particular attention to the genre of autobiography on request.

Sergei Dotsenko is Associate Professor at the Institute of Humanities, Tallinn University, Estonia. He holds a PhD from Tallinn University (2000). His research interests include the history of twentieth-century Russian literature, especially symbolism and modernist poetics. He has published a monograph, The Problems of Remizov's Poetics: Autobiographism as a Constructive Principle (Tallinn, 2000), 131 scholarly articles and reviews, and has edited 13 collections of articles.

Tatiana Dviniatina is Senior Research Associate at Institute of Russian Literature (Pushkin House) in St Petersburg and at the Institute for World Literature (IMLI) in Moscow, which form part of the Russian Academy of Sciences.

Andrea Gullotta is Lecturer in Russian at the University of Glasgow. He has also worked for the University of Palermo, the Ca' Foscari University of Venice and the University of Padua, where he obtained his PhD. His main field of research is the literature of the Gulag. He is the author of several articles and of the monograph Intellectual Life and Literature at Solovki 1923-1930. The Paris of the Northern Concentration Camps (Legenda, Cambridge, 2018).

Melanie Ilic is Professor of Soviet History at the University of Gloucestershire and Honorary Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for Russian, European and Eurasian Studies, The University of Birmingham. She has published widely in the areas of Soviet history, particularly on victim studies of the Great Terror, and Russian Women's Studies. Her current research focuses on the everyday lives of Soviet women.

Federico Iocca is a PhD candidate in Russian Language and Literature. He is a literary translator, whose fields of study are Russian theatre, samizdat literature (with a particular focus on Leningrad culture) and translation studies.

Joanna Jarzab-Napierała is Assistant Professor in English at the Adam Mickiewicz University of Poznań. She is a specialist in twentieth-century and contemporary Irish literature. Her doctoral thesis has been published as a monograph (Houses, Towns, Cities: The Changing Per- ception of Space and Place in Contemporary Irish Novels) in 2016. She also works on Russian literature. She is currently working on a new project concerning the influence of Russian prose on Irish prose fiction.

Tatiana Kuzovkina is Senior Research Fellow at the School of Humanities and Senior Specialist at the Iurii Lotman Semiotics Repository, Tallinn University. She is the holder of a PhD (Tartu University, 2007) and worked at the Laboratory of History and Semiotics from 1990 to 1993 as Iurii Lotman's secretary, and from 1997 to 2007 as a researcher at the Department of Russian Literature, University of Tartu. Since 1997, her work has involved systematizing and describing the archives of Iurii Lotman and Zara Mints. She is also the organizer of the Annual Lotman Days at the University of Tallinn

Polina A. Maksimovich is a PhD candidate in the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures at Northwestern University. Her dissertation traces the transformation of the nineteenth-century concept of the superfluous man into the Soviet period, where it received new life under the guise of the beggar. Her research interests include nineteenth- and twentieth-century intellectual history, modernism, Soviet drama, representation of the self in Russian culture and 'internal emigration' in the Soviet Union.

Dmitrii Nikolaev is a Leading Research Fellow in A.M. Gor'kii Institute of World Literature of the Russian Academy of Sciences in Moscow. He is the author of the book Russian Prose of the 1920s and 1930s (2006) and of more than 250 works about Russian literature. His main research interests are Russian literature of the first half of the twentieth century, literature and journalism of Russian emigration, textology, humour and satire.

Bartosz Osiewicz is a University Professor in the Department of Russian Literature in the Institute of Russian and Ukrainian Philology at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. He teaches the history of Russian literature (especially nineteenth and twentieth centuries). His main research fields are Russian singer-songwriters (avtorskaia pesnia) and modern Russian poetry. He is the author of the monographs Intertextuality in Vladimir Vysotskii's Poetry (Poznań, 2007) and Forms and Sources of Aleksandr Galich's Poetry (Poznań 2016). His articles have been published in Poland, Russia, Ukraine, Georgia, Spain and South Korea. He is a member of the Poznań Branch of the Slavic Commission of the Polish Academy of Sciences.

Wawrzyniec Popiel-Machnicki is a University Professor in the Department of Russian Literature in the Institute of Russian and Ukrainian Philology at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. The primary field of his research is the history of Russian literature of the twentieth and the twenty-first centuries. He mainly concentrates on cultural-religious aspects of Russian literature. He is the author of the monographs Nikołaj Klujew: poezja religijnego posłannictwa [Nikolai Kliuev: The Religious Mission of his Poetry] (Poznań, 2008), and (with Adam Pleskaczyński and Konstancja Pleskaczyńska) Podróże nieodkryte. Dziennik ekspedycji Bronisława Grąbczewskiego jako świadectwo historii i element dziedzictwa kulturowego [Unexplored Journeys: Bronisław Grąbczewski's Expedition Journal as Historical Testament and Cultural Heritage] (Poznań 2017). He is a vice-president of the Poznań branch of the Slavic Commission of the Polish Academy of Sciences.

Damiano Rebecchini is Associate Professor of Russian at the State University of Milan. His areas of research are the history of reading in Russia and court culture in the nineteenth century. He is the author of Il business della storia: il 1812 e il romanzo russo della prima metà dell'Ottocento fra ideologia e mercato [The Business of History. The 1812 Events and the Russian Novel in the First Half of Nineteenth Century Between Ideology and the Marketplace] (Salerno, 2016), and has co-edited two volumes: Reading in Russia. Literary Communication and Practices of Reading, 1760-1930 (Milan, 2016) and Reading Russia. A History of Reading in Modern Russia (forthcoming). In recent years, his research has focused on the education of Tsar Alexander II.

Naum Reznichenko is a Russian philologist and schoolteacher. He studied Russian philology at Gor'kii (now Nizhnii Novgorod) State University. He is the author of two books about Arsenii Tarkovskii's poetry and has written several articles devoted to Russian poets of the twentieth century. He lives and works in Kiev.

Aliaksandr Raspapou is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Russian Literature at the Institute of Russian and Ukrainian Studies of the Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. His research focuses on twentieth- and twenty-first century Russian literature and Russian contemporary cinema.

Marco Sabbatini is Associate Professor in Russian Literature and Language at the Department of Philology, Literature and Linguistics of the University of Pisa. He is a specialist of twentieth century Russian Literature, with a focus on Russo-Italian cultural emigration and relations. He is the author of several works about Samizdat, Soviet culture and unofficial literature.

Irina Sapunova is a student of the Moscow State University. Her work was part of a project of the Department of Theory of Literature in the Faculty of Philology.

Giovanni Savino is Visiting Associate Professor at the School of Public Policy of the RANEPa and Associate Professor at the Institute of Foreign Languages of the Moscow City Pedagogical University. His research interests are nationalisms and national identity in the Late Russian Empire, social and cultural history.

Irina Savkina is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Communication at the University of Tampere, Finland. She specializes in literary and cultural studies with a focus on the history of Russian literature and culture, autobiographical studies, gender studies, Russian popular culture and mass media. She is the author of three books and more than 170 scholarly articles.

Galina Shpilevaia is a Professor at the Department of History of Russian Literature, Theory and Methods of Teaching Literature of the Voronezh State Pedagogical University. Her research interests are the history of Russian literature of nineteenth-twentieth centuries and theory of literature. She is the author of more than 100 works about Pushkin, Tolstoy, Turgenev and other Russian writers and poets. She is a member of the Voronezh society of theater critics. She has organized 15 international conferences on Vladimir Vysotskii.

Natalia Zlydneva is head of the Department of Cultural History at the Institute for Slavic Studies, Russian Academy of Sciences. She is also Leading Research Professor at the State Institute of Art Studies and Leading Researcher at the Institute of World Culture, Moscow State University. She has taught at universities in Poland, the USA, and Estonia. She has produced over 260 publications including four books. Her areas of specialization include visual semiotics, the Russian avant-garde, intermediality and Slavic mythology.